The Berkmans' gift brings high-tech healing in a comfortable, modern setting

The Betty and David Berkman Building for Patient Care is a $24 million addition to Baptist Nassau, which opened in 2009, replacing an old patient wing with 48 spacious patient rooms that incorporate all the modern comforts of home. All rooms have flat-screen televisions, mini-fridges, wireless internet and sleeper sofas for family members who want to spend the night.

The Berkman Building is shaping the image of Baptist Medical Center Nassau as a jewel and community asset residents are proud of. Mrs. Berkman said, "Every time someone thanks us, we know what a big difference the Berkman Building has made in the community."

The Berkmans had a vacation home on Amelia Island for more than three decades.

Now they are full-time residents, involved in the community, serving on various boards and making generous contributions to charitable causes.

"We had an opportunity to do something very meaningful for this community," Mrs. Berkman said. "It was as simple as that."

We are extremely grateful for the generous support of many community members whose philanthropy enables us to provide the best possible care.

Community partnerships promote better health

As a not-for-profit, faith-based hospital, Baptist Nassau invests in the overall health of the community in many ways, from providing charity care to supporting local organizations – including the Council on Aging of Nassau County, Barnabas, and Boys and Girls Clubs of Nassau County Foundation – which provide health care-related services to the community.

The Council on Aging’s mission is to improve the lives of older adults with a special focus on those who are vulnerable and disadvantaged. This is accomplished through adult day care services, a local transportation service, Meals on Wheels, small home repairs and in-home services.

“Baptist Nassau is our lifeline,” said Janice Ancrum, executive director for the Council on Aging. “The hospital provides us with our home, so we can provide services to those who need us,” she said. “They partner with us in every way – from grounds and building maintenance to helping provide shuttle services, to providing space for senior activities and functions.”

On the other end of the age spectrum, Baptist Nassau collaborates with Boys and Girls Clubs to provide mentors to at-risk youth.

“We wanted to provide teens with a program that would help them become successful adults,” said Bill Gower, president of Boys and Girls Clubs of Nassau County. “Expanding Baptist’s Tipping the Scale mentoring program into Nassau County was a perfect solution. We have six mentors now and we will be increasing the number of employees and teens each quarter several employees are on the waiting list to become mentors in 2015.”

Barnabas has partnered with Baptist Nassau for more than a decade, and helped start the Samaritan Medical Clinic. Now called Barnabas Health Services, the clinic provides free primary and urgent care to uninsured adults in the community. In the last year, Baptist Nassau has provided more than $1 million of in-kind services to Barnabas Health Services, which served 1,480 patients who otherwise would not have had access to much-needed medical services.

“We rely on Baptist Nassau to help us meet this underserved population’s health care needs,” said Barnabas Executive Director Wanda Lanier.

We are grateful for the many dedicated physicians, nurses, board members and volunteers at Baptist Nassau who donate their time and talent to help us improve the health of the community outside the walls of our hospital.

“I spent some time in the ICU at Baptist Nassau – I had pancreatitis and pneumonia, and it was serious. The staff assured me that they would get me through this. They did – and I look back on it as a rewarding experience because I came out of it so well. I will never forget the compassionate, personal care I received.”

Baptist Nassau partners with Community Hospice to provide care on campus

In June, Baptist Nassau announced the opening of a new Community Hospice inpatient care center on the first floor of its new medical office building. The Community Hospice Jane and Bill Warner Center for Caring provides acute end-of-life care in a home-like setting.

“The fact that the new hospice center is literally attached to our main hospital makes patient transfers seamless and provides families with the peace of mind that their loved ones are being well cared for,” said Stephen Lee, hospital president of Baptist Nassau.

The new Community Hospice Center features eight private bedrooms and bathrooms, comfortable and spacious family gathering areas, a family laundry area and kitchen, and a meditation room. A tranquil walled garden surrounds the center. Family and friends may visit any time, including overnight stays, and family pets are welcome. The center has its own private entrance, making it feel like a stand-alone building while having the advantage of being connected to the hospital.

Community Hospice care enhances comfort and quality of life by focusing on medical needs, in addition to patients’ physical, emotional, social and spiritual needs and wishes. Physicians, nurses, psychosocial specialists, home health aides, chaplains and volunteers all come together to care for patients and provide support to their families.

ER expansion provides faster access to the best emergency care available

When Baptist purchased Nassau General in 1994, the ER had only five beds. Through the years, the ER has been updated to keep pace with advancements in medical technology. Today’s ER, renovated during 2014, has many enhancements, including two new additional treatment rooms, bringing the total to 17 beds.

All of the rooms are private and have been remodeled with updated décor that is more home-like. One of the key enhancements is in-room computers. Having computers at the patients’ bedside gives physicians and nurses direct access to patients’ most current medical records, which helps provide better care.

Patients can take comfort in knowing the full-service ER at Baptist Nassau is ready to treat them with fast, advanced emergency care. “When you come to Baptist Nassau, you will be seen by a board-certified emergency medicine physician who has the training and education to make the right diagnosis and provide you with the best medical care for the long term,” said Dr. Woodward. The ER at Baptist Nassau also has “fast track” service, which provides quick care for less critical needs.

Another benefit of coming to Baptist Nassau’s ER is that if patients need to be admitted to the hospital, they are already where they need to be with the right specialists and sub-specialists. If patients need care beyond Baptist Nassau’s scope, they can be transferred quickly to Baptist Medical Center Jacksonville. Many pediatric needs can be taken care of in Baptist Nassau’s ER, but if required, the hospital provides streamlined access to Wolfson Children’s Hospital in Jacksonville.

Baptist Nassau’s ER is open 24/7:
1250 South 18th Street
Fernandina Beach, FL 32034

With so many accomplishments during the past two decades, the future looks bright for Baptist Nassau. Thank you for entrusting us with your health care.
